Some of the most common pets are cats or dogs, but some people prefer a stranger pet. Through this set's exploration of strange pets, readers will learn how to care for weirder pets they may not have known they could own! Learn what it's like to own a potbellied pig or discover what life looks like with a ferret. For a creepy crawly pet, how does a tarantula sound? With full-color photographs paired with approachable text, readers are encouraged to learn more. Fact boxes on each page explore more about each animal and information readers need to know about owning them.

- Fact boxes explore important science information about each animal
- Graphic organizers call out important details about each pet's care
- High-interest topics encourage even reluctant readers to read more

BEARDIE BODIES

Bearded dragons get their name from the spikes on their neck. If a bearded dragon senses danger, it will stand still. Then it will puff out the spiky scales on its throat. This makes the lizard look like it has a big beard!

When a bearded dragon puffs out its throat, its beard may also turn black. This is to make the bearded dragon look more intimidating to help it scare away predators.

Male and female bearded dragons can both puff out their throats!

JUST THE FACTS!

Bearded dragons have short legs. However, they can run up to 9 miles (14.5 km) per hour!

Science is most fun when kids can see for themselves just how a concept works. Diagrams and activities they can try right away aid comprehension of core curriculum topics, such as forces and light, in this colorfully designed set. From making a simple circuit to understanding how instruments make music, the main content incorporates relatable, fun examples within thorough explanations of magnetism, color, echo, and more. Age-appropriate, accessible language supports reading fluency as well as science learning for young readers.

- Includes two to five activities with five steps or less, as well as questions with an answer key
- Simple diagrams complement the main text and draw in visual learners
- Table of contents, glossary, and index engage readers with nonfiction text features

Project Logic

LIBRARY AND eBook: $29.60

PAPERBACK: $12.70

6 1/2" x 9 1/8" • 48 pp. • Activities, Biographies, Full-Color Photographs, Glossary

Critical thinking is often included in science, social studies, and language arts curricula. Evaluating sources for confirmation bias and accuracy as well as understanding the scientific method are just a few examples of ways students encounter critical thinking. However, using the logic that's part of these critical thinking exercises is important in everyday life too! This set encourages students to be creative, get their facts right, prove their points, and test their ideas. Each volume includes relatable examples of how to use each principle in their daily life, such as at school or with family members, as well as questions to consider.

- Includes three to four short biographies in each book of individuals who used the title principle to find success
- Encourages independent problem-solving
- Engages readers with multiple puzzles and riddles as well as explanations for their answers
